SOLAR ACCELERATOR

7-Day Sales Rep
Certification Program

DAY 3

The Consultation Blueprint

Modules 3.1 – 3.10 | Environmental Control · BOLT Profiling · Discovery · Empathy · The Close

Control the Room. Diagnose the Pain. Close the Deal.

MODULE 3.1

In-Home Positioning & Environmental Control

Setting the Stage for the Close

MODULE 3.1 — ENVIRONMENTAL CONTROL

Setting the Stage for the Close

1. Why the first 5 minutes determine the outcome
2. Transitioning from the door to the table
3. The Expert Frame vs. The Guest Trap
4. Controlling the physical and psychological environment

The Pre-Arrival Mindset

- Review your lead notes — know their name, neighborhood, bill average before you knock
- Visualize the 'Yes': mentally rehearse a smooth, confident consultation
- Check your uniform — charged iPad, clean polo, breath mint; first impressions begin in your car
- Parking strategy: park on the street, not the driveway (consultants park on the street)

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Professionalism starts 10 minutes before you ring the bell. Parking on the street signals 'consultant,' not 'delivery driver.' This subtle cue shifts the homeowner's frame from transaction to consultation.

First Impressions at the Door

- The 3-Foot Rule: step back when the door opens — give them space, avoid pressure
- The 'I've Arrived' Smile: confident, warm, not desperate — you're the expert they were waiting for
- Use a prop (iPad or design folder) to look official and purposeful, not empty-handed
- Breaking the Threshold: wait for the door to open fully, then use the 'Assume Entry' walk

DIALOGUE

Rep:
Hey [Name]! I'm [Your Name] with [Company]. I've got those design options we discussed. Where's the best place for us to spread these out for a second?
Homeowner:
Oh, uh — come on in. I guess we can go to the kitchen...

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The moment you appear at the door is when the homeowner decides if you're a threat or an expert. Body language tells the full story before you say a word.

Authority Positioning: Expert vs. Guest

- The Guest Trap: if they offer you water, ask you to sit on the couch — they are in control
- The Expert Frame: you guide them to the table, you set the agenda, you lead
- Use Directions, not Suggestions — 'Let's head to the kitchen table' vs. 'Is the kitchen okay?'
- Manage the flow: move through the house with intention, not hesitation

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Most reps fall into the Guest Trap within 60 seconds of entry. The homeowner defaults to social norms. Your job is to redirect — politely but firmly — to the Expert frame.

Seating Strategy: Kitchen Table vs. The Couch

❌ THE COUCH (AVOID)

- Too relaxed — homeowner is in 'TV mode'
- Side-by-side or opposite creates an adversarial or social dynamic
- Low coffee table kills your iPad presentation
- You're a guest, not a consultant
- Deal momentum is lost in the cushions

✅ THE KITCHEN TABLE

- This is where bills get paid and financial decisions get made
- 90-degree seating rule — sit adjacent, not opposite (less interrogation energy)
- Full visibility of the iPad at all times
- You control the space and the pace
- The homeowner enters 'decision mode' automatically

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Never present on a low coffee table. The kitchen table is the psychological 'command center' of every home. Getting them there is half the close.

Eliminating Distractions: The Silence Strategy

- The TV: 'Do you mind if we mute that real quick? I want to make sure I don't miss anything you tell me.'
- Pets: Use the 'I love dogs, but...' move — redirect them kindly before they derail the conversation
- Kids: The iPad Babysitter — have a kid-friendly app ready to hand over on a secondary device
- You cannot compete with Netflix, ESPN, or a barking Labrador — address distractions before you begin

DIALOGUE

Rep:
Do you mind if we just turn that down for a sec? I want to give you my full attention — and honestly I'm a little jealous of whatever you're watching.
Homeowner:
[laughs] Sure, no problem.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: This is non-negotiable. One rep lost a $38k deal because he tried to present over a game show with the volume on. Address every distraction before you open the iPad.

Opening the Consultation Frame

Setting the agenda before the presentation removes 80% of the homeowner's guard.

Rep: Before I pull anything up, let me tell you exactly what the next 30 minutes looks like. I'm going to ask you some questions about your situation, show you the numbers, answer anything you want. And at the end — if it makes total sense, great. If it doesn't, no hard feelings whatsoever. Does that sound fair?

Homeowner: Yeah... that sounds reasonable.

Rep: Perfect. And I promise I'll be straight with you — if this doesn't make financial sense for your home, I'll tell you that too. Sound good?

Homeowner: Yeah, that's actually refreshing to hear.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: This script lowers their guard immediately. You're giving them an exit — but most won't use it. The 'No Pressure Promise' disarms the most skeptical homeowners.

The 'No/Yes/Maybe' Outcome Frame

- Set the agenda: 'I'll show you the numbers, answer your questions, and you'll know exactly where you stand'
- Define acceptable outcomes upfront: Yes, No, or 'Not right now but here's what needs to change'
- Time-box the meeting: 'This usually takes about 30–40 minutes — does that work?'
- Tell them what will NOT happen: 'I'm not going to pressure you. If I'm doing that, call me out.'

📋 TRAINER NOTE: When you define the outcome options before the consultation, you eliminate the most common objection — 'I need to think about it' — because you've already agreed that a 'no' is a valid answer.

🎯 ACTIVITY

Activity: Room Setup Roleplay

OBJECTIVE: Control the environment and establish the Expert Frame within the first 3 minutes of entry

1. Set up a mock living room — couch, coffee table, TV remote
2. One rep plays 'Distracted Homeowner' (TV on, dog toy on couch, ready to sit you down)
3. Sales rep must: redirect to the kitchen table, mute the TV, establish the consultation frame
4. Observer scores on 'Authority Score' (1–10) — Did they lead or follow?
5. Debrief: What happened at the door? Where did control shift?

15 MIN

MODULE 3.2

Personality Profiling: The BOLT Framework

Read People in Seconds. Adapt or Lose the Deal.

MODULE 3.2 — THE BOLT FRAMEWORK

The Psychology of Communication

1. Why most reps sell the way they like to be sold to — and lose deals because of it
2. The 4 homeowner personality types and how to ID them fast
3. Adapting your tone, pace, and language to match their wiring
4. Handling mixed-personality couples

The BOLT Framework: 4 Homeowner Types

🐂 B — BULL (Driver/Dominant)

- Direct, fast, bottom-line thinker
- Wants ROI and time savings
- Hates fluff and emotional appeals
- Closes fast when convinced — or shuts you down

🦉 O — OWL (Analytical/Logical)

- Data-driven, skeptical, deliberate
- Needs specs, warranties, charts
- Will research everything you say
- Closes slow but with total conviction

🦁 L — LION (Expressive/Enthusiastic)

- Talkative, emotional, big-picture
- Buys on vision and status
- Distracted easily — keep energy high
- Closes fast once they're 'in love'

🐢 T — TURTLE (Amiable/Risk-Averse)

- Soft-spoken, avoids conflict
- Needs safety, security, trust
- Will agree with everything then stall
- Closes when fear is removed

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Most reps sell TO themselves — the Analytical rep bores the Lion, the Enthusiastic rep overwhelms the Owl. The goal is to mirror THEIR communication style.

The Bull: Dominant Driver

- Signals: Direct eye contact, firm handshake, 'How much does this cost?' within 90 seconds
- Motivation: ROI, time savings, winning against the utility — frame it as a financial win
- Red Flags: Never waste their time with mission statements or 'green energy' speeches
- Close the loop fast: give them the numbers, let them lead, then shut up and let them decide

DIALOGUE

Bull HO:
Look, I've got 20 minutes. What are we talking about here?
Rep:
Totally fair. Based on your $290 bill, you'd eliminate that in year one and lock in your rate for 25 years. Let me show you the math — takes 3 minutes.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Bulls want the bottom line. If you lead with 'Let me tell you about our company's mission...' you've lost them in 30 seconds. Lead with the math.

The Owl: Analytical Logician

- Signals: Takes notes, asks 'What kind of inverter?', has already Googled your company
- Motivation: Accuracy, verifiable data, technical specs — they want to 'discover the truth'
- Strategy: Don't hype them — out-fact them and let the data sell itself
- Use charts, datasheets, and third-party validation (NREL, SEIA, utility data)

DIALOGUE

Owl HO:
How do I know the production estimates are accurate? Your company built the model.
Rep:
Great question — we use NREL's PVWatts calculator, which is the same tool the Department of Energy uses. Here's what that looks like for your address specifically...

📋 TRAINER NOTE: You cannot 'hype' an Owl. They have a mental BS detector running at all times. Respect their intelligence, answer technical questions directly, and let the data close the deal.

The Lion: Expressive Enthusiast

- Signals: Talkative, high energy, messy house, asks 'Will my neighbors be able to see them?'
- Motivation: Recognition, being 'first,' status, the cool factor — they want the story to tell
- Strategy: Match their energy, paint the vision, use social proof ('Your neighbor on Oak St just went live')
- Keep it moving — Lions get distracted; redirect back to the vision before they chase tangents

DIALOGUE

Lion HO:
Oh wow, I love it. My wife's going to think it's so cool. Do people actually notice them?
Rep:
100%. Honestly, we get referrals from the neighbors who keep asking 'Where'd you get that?' — people notice. You'd be one of the first on this street.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Lions buy on emotion and vision, not math. Tell them how it will look, how it will feel, what story they'll tell at the HOA meeting. The excitement IS the close.

The Turtle: Amiable and Risk-Averse

- Signals: Soft-spoken, nods along, says 'That sounds nice' — but won't commit
- Motivation: Safety, security, not making a mistake — they fear regret more than they want savings
- Strategy: Slow down, emphasize warranties, use 'we' and 'us,' position yourself as a trusted guide
- Uncover the real fear: 'It sounds like your main concern is making sure this is fully backed up, is that right?'

DIALOGUE

Turtle HO:
It all sounds good, but I just... I don't know. I'd want to think it over.
Rep:
That makes complete sense. Most people feel exactly that way before we talk through it. What's the one thing you'd want to feel 100% comfortable about before moving forward?

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Turtles will tell you everything is fine right up until the moment they don't sign. Their 'I need to think about it' is always rooted in unspoken fear. Your job is to name the fear and neutralize it.

Fast ID: Reading Personality in 90 Seconds

- First Question Test: 'How much?' = Bull. 'How does it work?' = Owl. 'How does it look?' = Lion. 'Is it safe?' = Turtle
- Visual cues: Tidy home with spreadsheets on the table = Owl. Sports trophies and bold art = Lion or Bull
- Verbal pace: Fast/blunt = Bull or Lion. Slow/measured = Owl or Turtle
- Energy test: Match their pace for 60 seconds — if they speed up, they're expressive; if they slow down, they're analytical 📋 TRAINER NOTE: You have the first 90 seconds of conversation to ID the type. After that, you should already be adapting your language, pace, and evidence style. The fastest reps do this automatically.

Mixed Personality Couples

- The Bull/Turtle Dynamic: One wants the numbers, one wants the reassurance — give both simultaneously
- The Owl/Lion Dynamic: Satisfy the Lion's vision first, then anchor the Owl with data so they can justify the decision
- Financial Controller vs. Aesthetic Controller: One cares about the ROI, the other cares about the roof and reputation
- Rule: Never focus exclusively on one spouse — the ignored spouse becomes the silent objection

📋 TRAINER NOTE: In almost every couple, one person is 'The Money Brain' and one is 'The Feeling Brain.' You must satisfy both. Ignoring one means they'll kill the deal later when you're not in the room.

🎯 ACTIVITY

Activity: The BOLT Identification Game

OBJECTIVE: Rapidly identify homeowner type and adapt your opening approach in real time

1. Watch 3 short video clips of homeowner interactions (real calls or instructor roleplay)
2. After each clip: write the BOLT type and your reasoning
3. Write 2 opening sentences you would use for that specific homeowner
4. Compare with a partner — discuss why you categorized them differently
5. Bonus: Identify mixed-personality couples and map your strategy for each

20 MIN

MODULE 3.3

Real-World Homeowner Scenario Library

Preparing for the 'Difficult' Ones

MODULE 3.3 — SCENARIO LIBRARY

Strategy Over Reactivity

1. When you know the archetype, you know the playbook
2. The 5 most common homeowner profiles you'll face in the field
3. How to identify each one within 2 minutes of entry
4. Opening hooks and trust-building strategies for each type

Archetype 1: The Burned Homeowner

- Psychology: High sales resistance — had a bad experience or knows someone who did
- Signals: Arms crossed, 'I've heard this before,' mentions a specific bad company or story
- Strategy: Don't defend the industry — join them in criticizing the bad actors to build trust
- Focus: Radical transparency, third-party proof, slow pace — earn the right to present

DIALOGUE

HO:
Look, I had a solar company come out last year and it was a total nightmare. I don't trust these companies.
Rep:
Honestly? You're right to feel that way. There are some real cowboys out there. Let me show you exactly what to look for — and if I can't check every box, I'll tell you to wait.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Never get defensive when they bring up a bad experience. The fastest path to trust is to agree with them that bad actors exist — then show them how you're different with evidence, not words.

Archetype 2: The Analytical Researcher

- Psychology: Believes they know more than you after 3 hours of YouTube research
- Signals: Printed articles on the table, asks about microinverters vs. string inverters before hello
- Strategy: 'I appreciate your homework' framing — let them feel right, then fill the gaps
- Deep dives are your friend: go technical, validate their research, then reveal what they missed

DIALOGUE

HO:
I've done a lot of research. I know all about string inverters and degradation rates.
Rep:
That's actually great — you've already done the hard work. Can I ask what you found on production modeling for your specific roof pitch? That's where most of the articles miss a step...

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The analytical researcher isn't your enemy — they're your most loyal customer once converted. They want to feel like THEY found the answer. Your job is to guide them to your conclusion.

Archetype 3: The Busy Homeowner

- Psychology: Stressed, time-poor — views your appointment as an intrusion
- Signals: Answering phone during your arrival, shoes on like they're about to leave
- Strategy: Offer the '5-minute version' immediately — if you fight for time, they'll resent you
- When you offer brevity, they often give you more time — paradox of scarcity works in your favor

DIALOGUE

HO:
I have about 15 minutes. I've got somewhere to be.
Rep:
No problem — I'll give you the CliffNotes version. Two numbers, one decision. If it doesn't make sense in 10 minutes, we can schedule a proper time. Fair enough?
HO:
Sure... go ahead.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The biggest mistake reps make with Busy Homeowners is trying to hold them in the room. Instead, offer to leave. Most will relax and tell you to stay.

Archetype 4: The Friendly But Non-Committal

- Psychology: Agrees with everything — but has zero intention of signing today
- Signals: 'That makes so much sense,' 'We've been thinking about it,' then 'We'll let you know'
- Strategy: Force an early concept decision — 'Is this a nice-to-have or a need-to-have for you?'
- These are 'Polite No's' — flush the real objection early before building the full presentation

DIALOGUE

Rep:
I want to make sure I'm building the right plan for you. On a scale of 1–10, how serious are you about fixing your bill this year?
HO:
Oh, like a 6 or 7 I guess...
Rep:
Okay — what's the 3 or 4 that's holding you back? Let's talk about that now.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Friendly non-committal homeowners will waste your entire presentation and then smile and wave you out the door. Force a concept decision at the 10-minute mark — not after you've shown everything.

Archetype 5: The Utility-Loyal Homeowner

- Psychology: Fear of change — 'The utility has always been there for me'
- Signals: 'I've never had a problem with [Utility],' defensive when you mention rate hikes
- Strategy: Position the utility as the risky option using the Rent vs. Own analogy
- Cost of Inaction math: 'Here's what you'll pay the utility over 25 years if you do nothing...'

DIALOGUE

HO:
I mean, the utility's always just been there. I don't see why I'd switch.
Rep:
Totally fair. Here's the question I'd ask: If your landlord kept raising rent 8% every year — would you keep renting, or would you want to own? The utility is your energy landlord.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The utility-loyal homeowner isn't really loyal — they're change-averse. Show them what loyalty to the utility costs in real dollars over time. The math does the persuading.

🎯 ACTIVITY

Activity: The Scenario Carousel

OBJECTIVE: Rapidly switch communication style to match the archetype in front of you

1. Set up 4 stations around the room — each labeled with one archetype
2. One rep at each station plays the homeowner using a provided character card
3. Rotating rep has exactly 2 minutes to deliver their opening hook for that archetype
4. Observers score: Did their tone, pace, and language match the homeowner's type?
5. Debrief: Which archetype was hardest? Why? What changed between stations?

20 MIN

MODULE 3.4

Tactical Empathy & Mirroring

The Chris Voss Method for Solar Sales

MODULE 3.4 — TACTICAL EMPATHY

Listening with Intent. Labeling the Emotion.

1. Why talking less closes more deals
2. The mirroring technique: repeat 1–3 words, unlock 10 more sentences
3. Labeling emotions to bypass the homeowner's ego
4. The tactical pause: silence as a sales tool

The Mirroring Technique

- Definition: Repeat the last 1–3 words of what the homeowner just said in an inquisitive tone
- Goal: Encourage them to expand and reveal more without asking a direct question
- Why it works: People are wired to complete their own thoughts when you reflect them back
- Use an upward-ending tone, like you're gently asking them to continue 📋 TRAINER NOTE: Mirroring sounds almost too simple to work — but it is one of the most field-tested techniques in hostage negotiation. In solar, it gets homeowners to tell you their real objections without you having to pry.

Mirroring in Action

Notice how the mirror acts as a 'nudge' — the rep never asks a question, but gets the full story.

HO: I'm just worried about the roof leaking.

Rep: The roof leaking?

HO: Yeah, my neighbor had solar installed and his kitchen ceiling got a water spot six months later...

Rep: A water spot in the kitchen...

HO: Yeah and then the company was impossible to reach. Took them 3 months to fix it. That's what I'm scared of.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The rep said 8 words in 5 turns. The homeowner revealed their real fear (installer responsiveness) in full detail. Now the rep can address the REAL objection.

Labeling Emotions: The Empathy Tool

- Labels bypass the ego — they let the homeowner confirm or correct you without feeling attacked
- Use: 'It seems like...', 'It sounds like...', 'It feels like...'
- NEVER start a label with 'I' — 'I hear that you're frustrated' puts you at the center
- If you label wrong, that's fine — they'll correct you and you'll get the truth either way

DIALOGUE

Rep:
It sounds like you've had some bad experiences with contractors in general — not just solar.
HO:
No, actually it's not that. It's more that I just don't trust that the savings will be what they say.
Rep:
Ah — so it's really about whether the numbers are real. That's a fair concern. Let's look at that together.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Labeling is the fastest path to genuine connection with a skeptical homeowner. Even a wrong label gets you the right answer.

Labeling Examples in Solar Consultations

- 'It seems like you've put a lot of thought into this already.' → Opens the door to their research
- 'It sounds like you're frustrated with the utility rate hikes.' → Validates their pain
- 'It feels like there's some hesitation about a long-term commitment.' → Names the fear without accusation
- 'It seems like the roof is a bigger concern than the savings right now.' → Re-orders your conversation

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Every label is a hypothesis. Treat it like one. Deliver it calmly and then go silent — let them respond. Do NOT follow a label with another question; let the label breathe.

The Power of the Tactical Pause

- The 4-Second Rule: after a hard question or label, wait 4 full seconds before speaking again
- Silence creates psychological pressure — most people will fill it by revealing something important
- The person who speaks first after a loaded question usually gives more away
- Practice: count '1-Mississippi, 2-Mississippi...' in your head — 4 seconds feels like an eternity but it works

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The tactical pause is the most underused tool in field sales. Silence after 'What would it take for this to make sense for you?' will surface the real objection 80% of the time — if you just wait.

Calibrated Questions: How & What

- Always start with 'How' or 'What' — they invite collaboration, not defensiveness
- 'Why' triggers the defensive brain: 'Why do you feel that way?' feels like an accusation
- 'What makes you say that?' vs. 'Why do you think that?' — same information, opposite emotional reaction
- 'How am I supposed to match that offer?' — the Chris Voss move that turns the tables

DIALOGUE

Rep:
What is it about the 25-year timeframe that concerns you?
HO:
Well, we might sell the house before then...
Rep:
Okay — what would it mean for the sale of the house if the solar was fully paid off and added to the value?

📋 TRAINER NOTE: 'Why' activates the amygdala — the homeowner feels they need to justify themselves. 'What' and 'How' activate curiosity and problem-solving. Same words, completely different neurological response.

🎯 ACTIVITY

Activity: Empathy Roleplay — No Pitching Allowed

OBJECTIVE: Use only Mirrors and Labels for 2 full minutes — zero pitching, zero features, zero numbers

1. Partner A plays a homeowner complaining about their utility bill or a past contractor experience
2. Partner B can ONLY respond with Mirrors or Labels for 2 full minutes
3. Debrief: How much information did Partner B gather without a single pitch?
4. Switch roles and repeat
5. Group share: What did Partner B learn that would have changed how they presented?

15 MIN

MODULE 3.5

Question Architecture: The Discovery Sequence

The Doctor's Consultation. Diagnosis Before Prescription.

MODULE 3.5 — DISCOVERY SEQUENCE

The 12-Question Framework

1. Why presenting before diagnosing makes you a product pusher, not a professional
2. The three categories of discovery: Current State, Future State, Decision-Making
3. How to build toward the 'That's right' transition
4. Listening for red flags and hidden objections during discovery

Category 1: Current State — The Pain

- 'How long have you lived here?' — establishes equity, ownership mindset, and rapport
- 'What have you noticed about your bill over the last two summers?' — surfaces the pain in their own words
- 'What did the utility do to your rates last month?' — activates frustration and loss aversion
- 'How do you feel about your current relationship with the utility?' — emotional underpinning of their motivation

📋 TRAINER NOTE: You are building the 'Cost of Doing Nothing.' Every answer to these questions becomes ammunition for the close. Don't rush this category — the gold is in their language, not your pitch.

Category 2: Future State — The Urgency

- 'Where do you see rates going in the next 5–10 years?' — makes them predict the pain themselves
- 'If you do nothing, what's the exit strategy for these bills?' — forces them to face the alternative
- 'What would you do with an extra $150 a month back in your pocket?' — connects savings to something personal
- 'How important is it to own your power vs. rent it from the utility?' — plants the ownership mindset

📋 TRAINER NOTE: These questions create the 'Bridge' between their current pain and their desired future. When the homeowner builds the case for solar themselves, your job in the close is simply to confirm what they already said.

Category 3: Decision-Making — The Qualification

- 'Aside from you two, is there anyone else whose opinion you value on this?' — flushes out hidden decision-makers
- 'On a scale of 1–10, how committed are you to fixing this bill this year?' — reveals urgency level immediately
- 'What's the one thing that would stop you from moving forward today?' — pre-surfaces the objection
- 'What are you looking for in a solar company?' — they tell you exactly how to close them

DIALOGUE

Rep:
On a scale of 1–10, how committed are you to fixing this bill in the next 60 days?
HO:
Probably like a 7.
Rep:
What's the 3 or 4 that's not quite there yet?
HO:
I guess I just want to make sure the installation is clean. Our last contractor left a mess...

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Question 11 is the most powerful in the entire framework. 'What would stop you?' at the discovery stage means you handle objections before they become deal-killers. Most reps wait until the close to ask this.

Listening for Red Flags

- 'We're planning to move in about 2 years' — solar ROI doesn't close in time; disqualify or reframe around home value
- 'I'm retiring next month and my income is dropping' — credit qualification risk; probe gently before proceeding
- 'My roof is 25 years old and I can't afford a new one right now' — do not ignore this; address it or disqualify
- 'We only use about $40 a month in electricity' — extremely low usage may not justify system cost

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Do NOT ignore red flags. Reps who push past red flags to get the install create chargebacks, cancellations, and reputation damage. Address them in discovery or disqualify gracefully.

Identifying Hidden Objections

- The 'Is that it?' follow-up: after they share a concern, always ask 'Is that the main thing, or is there something else?'
- Dig deeper on vague answers: 'I need to think about it' always has a specific fear underneath it
- Use discovery to pre-close: 'If we could solve that completely, would that remove your concern?'
- The iceberg principle: what they say first is rarely the real objection — the real one is below the surface

📋 TRAINER NOTE: 80% of 'I need to think about it' is a specific, solvable fear that was never named. The rep who digs for it in discovery never gets surprised by it at the close.

Transitioning to the Presentation: The 'That's Right' Close

Never open the iPad until you've gotten the verbal 'That's right' from the homeowner.

Rep: So let me make sure I've got this right before I show you anything. Your bill has been running around $280 a month, and last year alone it jumped twice. You've got maybe 25 more years of payments ahead of you if nothing changes, and that's money you'd rather be putting toward your daughter's college fund. Does that sound about right?

HO: Yeah... yeah, that's exactly it.

Rep: Okay. Based on everything you just told me, here's what I put together for your home specifically...

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The 'That's right' is the homeowner giving you permission to present. It signals alignment, validates their pain, and puts them in a 'Yes' mental state before the numbers even appear.

🎯 ACTIVITY

Activity: Full Discovery Roleplay

OBJECTIVE: Run a complete 15-minute discovery using all 12 questions — reach the 'That's right' transition

1. One rep plays the Garcia Household (Mr. Garcia = Bull, Mrs. Garcia = Turtle)
2. Sales rep runs the full 12-question discovery sequence — checklist in hand
3. Evaluator tracks: Were questions asked in logical order? Were red flags noted?
4. Goal: End with a clear 'That's right' summary that the homeowner confirms
5. Debrief: What information came out that changed the presentation strategy?

20 MIN

MODULE 3.6

Spouse & Decision-Maker Dynamics

The One-Legger Trap. Equalizing the Room.

MODULE 3.6 — DECISION-MAKER DYNAMICS

Managing Multi-Party Consultations

1. Why 'One-Legger' appointments close at under 10%
2. How to equalize both decision-makers in the room
3. Identifying the real decision-maker (hint: it's not always who talks most)
4. Winning over the Skeptical Spouse without creating conflict

Why 'One-Leggers' Kill Deals

<10%

Close Rate

One-Legger appointments

40k+

Avg. Deal Size

You're asking 1 person to sell this

3x

Higher Cancellations

When spouse wasn't in the room

📋 TRAINER NOTE: A One-Legger means you're asking one person to sell a $40,000+ financial decision to their spouse using a summary of a presentation they half-remember. That's not a strategy — it's wishful thinking.

Why the Telephone Game Kills the Deal

- The present spouse will forget 60% of what you said — and misremember the other 40%
- They don't have your answers, your charts, your rebuttals, or your confidence
- The absent spouse's 'Protection Instinct' kicks in — they default to 'No' for anything they didn't experience
- Your close rate on One-Leggers is essentially your referral rate — you're presenting to one person to maybe persuade another

DIALOGUE

Rep:
Is your husband going to be joining us today?
HO:
Oh no, he said just go ahead — whatever I decide is fine.
Rep:
That's great he trusts you! For something this size though, I'd love to have him here so I can answer his questions directly. Would Tuesday work for both of you?

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Always work to reschedule if a key decision-maker is missing. Use: 'I want to make sure I can answer both of your questions in person — it's not fair to you if [spouse] has questions I'm not there to answer.'

Equalizing Both Decision-Makers

- Distribute eye contact equally — if you focus only on the talker, the quiet one becomes a silent objector
- Ask the quiet spouse direct questions: 'What's your take on this? I want to make sure this makes sense for both of you'
- Match your communication style to each spouse's BOLT type simultaneously
- Never make one spouse feel 'less important' — the ignored spouse becomes the 'no' that shows up 24 hours later

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The quieter spouse is almost always the final decision-maker. They're running a parallel evaluation the whole time. If they leave the consultation unconvinced, no signature holds.

Handling the Skeptical Spouse

- Do NOT argue, defend, or get frustrated — the skeptic is doing their job: protecting the household
- Use Tactical Empathy: 'It seems like you've got some concerns about this that maybe haven't been addressed yet'
- Bring them into the process — ask what THEY would need to see to feel comfortable
- The gold rule: the skeptic who converts becomes your most loyal champion — they'll refer aggressively

DIALOGUE

Skeptical Spouse:
I just think we should get more quotes. I don't see why we have to decide today.
Rep:
That's a completely fair position and I respect it. I actually encourage comparison shopping. Can I ask — what specifically would you want the other companies to prove to you? That way you're comparing apples to apples.

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The skeptical spouse is your best friend in disguise. If you win them over, the deal is bulletproof. If you ignore them, it's a time bomb.

🎯 ACTIVITY

Activity: The Skeptical Spouse Roleplay

OBJECTIVE: Balance the conversation and win over the skeptic without alienating the excited spouse

1. Three-person roleplay: Rep, Excited Spouse, and Skeptical/Grumpy Spouse
2. Rep must use tactical empathy on the skeptic while keeping the excited spouse engaged
3. Observer watches specifically for: who does the rep face more? Does the skeptic feel heard?
4. Rep must get BOTH spouses to verbalize agreement before the consultation ends
5. Debrief: What did the rep do when they disagreed? How was the balance managed?

MODULE 3.7

Roof & Site Assessment

The Physical Truth. Don't Sell What Can't Install.

MODULE 3.7 — SITE ASSESSMENT

Building Trust Through Technical Competence

1. Why homeowners trust the rep who actually looks at their roof and panel
2. The 5 key inspection points every rep must assess before quoting
3. Electrical panel red flags and how to turn them into opportunities
4. How to handle HOA restrictions and shading issues proactively

Roof Inspection: The 5-Point Check

- Age: 10–15+ year old roofs are a red flag — if they need a new roof, sell the roof + solar combo
- Shingle condition: Look for granule loss in gutters, curling edges, missing sections
- Structural integrity: Walk the roofline visually — dips or waves indicate rafter issues
- Pitch and orientation: South-facing, 15–35 degree pitch = ideal production; East/West = acceptable

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Homeowners trust a rep who actually inspects their property. Walking outside to look at the roof before presenting signals professionalism, confidence, and technical credibility — all three of which accelerate the close.

Shading & Obstructions

- The Tree Problem: morning shade kills daily production — be honest, not optimistic
- Chimneys and vents: account for setback requirements (local codes vary — 18" minimum typical)
- Compare LIDAR satellite data to your visual inspection — software doesn't catch all obstructions
- If trimming a tree is required: tell them NOW, not 3 weeks into the permit process

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Shade lies are one of the top reasons for customer complaints and chargebacks. A rep who tells the truth about a shading problem early looks professional. A rep who hides it to close the deal looks fraudulent.

The Electrical Panel: Your Secret Sales Tool

- Amperage check: 200-amp panels are ideal; 100-amp may need an upgrade (up-sell opportunity)
- Space for a new breaker: confirm there are open slots before promising an interconnection timeline
- Red flag brands: Zinsco and Federal Pacific panels are fire hazards — finding one is a service opportunity
- Always inspect the panel — a rep who can explain the MSP builds instant technical credibility

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Finding an old or dangerous panel isn't a deal-killer — it's a deal-sweetener. Position it as: 'Good news — we found a safety issue before it found you. Here's how we can address that as part of the project.'

HOA & Mounting Considerations

- Ask about HOA status in discovery — find out BEFORE designing the system
- Front-facing panel restrictions are common — check HOA guidelines for panel placement rules
- HOA approval timelines vary: 30–90 days in many markets — set expectations immediately
- Ground mount vs. Roof mount: when the roof is suboptimal, ground mount is the professional alternative

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The rep who discovers an HOA restriction during the proposal (not the permit stage) looks incompetent. Ask in discovery. Address it proactively. Manage expectations before the homeowner googles it.

Site Assessment: Green Light vs. Red Light

✅ GREEN LIGHT INSTALLS

- Roof under 10 years old, south-facing
- 200-amp updated electrical panel
- No shade from 9am–3pm window
- No HOA or HOA pre-approved solar
- High monthly bill ($200+) with consistent usage
- Owns the home, solid credit profile

🚨 RED LIGHT INDICATORS

- Roof 20+ years old, granule loss visible
- 100-amp or Zinsco/Federal Pacific panel
- Heavy shading from mature trees
- HOA unknown or historically difficult
- Bill under $80/month, minimal usage
- Moving within 2 years, credit concerns

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Every rep should be doing a 5-minute site assessment before opening the iPad. You're building credibility AND qualifying the deal simultaneously.

MODULE 3.8

Disqualification Mastery

The Power of No. Protecting Your Time.

MODULE 3.8 — DISQUALIFICATION MASTERY

When NOT to Sell

1. Why top 1% reps disqualify more leads than average reps
2. The 4 major disqualification signals that kill installs
3. Why telling someone 'not right now' builds more trust than a pitch
4. The Soft DQ: keeping the door open and collecting referrals

Major Disqualification Signals

- Moving within 2 years: Solar ROI typically needs 5–7 years to break even — advise against it honestly
- Credit score under 600 with no co-signer: Financing won't get approved; don't waste 2 hours building a proposal
- Roof replacement needed but no budget: Can't install safely without addressing the roof first
- Extremely low usage (the $40 bill): System cost will never pencil — a small system makes no financial sense

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Top reps spend their time closing. They do not spend their time chasing. Disqualifying the bottom 20% of leads is what frees up the time and energy to close the top 20% properly.

Why Disqualifying Builds Trust — and Referrals

- The 'Consultant' move: 'I'm not going to sell you something that doesn't make sense for you right now'
- Telling someone the truth when you could have sold them anyway = the most powerful trust signal in sales
- People refer companies that didn't take advantage of them — disqualified homeowners send referrals
- Your integrity is your longest-lasting sales tool — one honest 'not yet' creates 3 future opportunities

DIALOGUE

Rep:
Honestly — based on the shade from your oak tree and the fact that you're relocating in 18 months, solar doesn't make financial sense for you right now. I'd be doing you a disservice if I let you sign today.
HO:
Wow... I appreciate that. My brother-in-law just bought a new place though — should I send him your number?

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The most powerful referrals come from people you didn't sell. When you tell a homeowner 'this doesn't make sense for you right now' and walk away, they will call their neighbor who DOES make sense.

The Soft DQ: Not Now, Not Never

- 'Based on your roof age, we'd want to wait until you've replaced it — probably 12–18 months from now'
- Leave a clear path back: 'Here's exactly what needs to change before solar makes sense for you'
- Keep them in your CRM with a follow-up trigger — the Soft DQ becomes a future pipeline asset
- Always close on a referral: 'Do you know anyone who owns their home and has a high electric bill?'

📋 TRAINER NOTE: The Soft DQ is not a lost deal — it's a delayed deal plus a referral opportunity. Every Soft DQ should end with a specific 're-entry trigger' and a referral ask.

MODULE 3.9

Full Discovery Simulation

The Garcia Household. Certification of Discovery.

MODULE 3.9 — FULL SIMULATION

Putting It All Together

1. The Garcia Household scenario: Bull + Turtle couple
2. Testing all Day 3 skills simultaneously in a live simulation
3. Evaluation checklist: Environment, BOLT, Discovery, Empathy
4. AI simulation for immediate field-realistic practice

Scenario Setup: The Garcia Household

🐂 MR. GARCIA — THE BULL

- Busy, direct, bottom-line focused
- Hates the utility, wants to save money
- Will challenge your time estimates
- Needs the ROI in the first 5 minutes

🐢 MRS. GARCIA — THE TURTLE

- Worried about the roof & installation
- Thinks it 'sounds too good to be true'
- Won't voice concerns unless asked
- Needs safety, warranties, and reassurance

🏠 THE HOME

- 12-year-old roof (borderline flag)
- $280/month average electric bill
- 100-amp electrical panel (upgrade needed)
- South-facing roof, minimal shading

📋 YOUR OBJECTIVES

- Control seating within 3 minutes
- Identify BOLT type for each Garcia
- Ask 8+ discovery questions
- Reach the 'That's right' transition

📋 TRAINER NOTE: This scenario tests every skill taught in Day 3. Mr. Garcia will pressure you for the numbers early. Mrs. Garcia won't say much unless you ask her directly. Both must be satisfied to get the close.

Evaluation Checklist: Day 3 Certification

- ✅ Environmental Control: Did they guide the Garcias to the kitchen table? Eliminate the TV?
- ✅ BOLT Identification: Did they correctly ID Mr. Garcia (Bull) and Mrs. Garcia (Turtle) within 5 minutes?
- ✅ Discovery Depth: Did they ask 8+ questions across all 3 categories (Pain, Urgency, Decision)?
- ✅ Tactical Empathy: Did they use at least 2 mirrors and 2 labels during the consultation?

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Managers will score reps using this checklist. A score of 80% or above on all four categories = Day 3 Certified. Below 80% = focused coaching session before advancing to Day 4.

🎯 ACTIVITY

AI Simulation: The Garcia Household

OBJECTIVE: Complete a realistic 15-minute consultation with the AI-powered Garcia Household bot

1. Scan the QR code or click the simulation link to launch the Garcia AI voice bot
2. Introduce yourself and attempt to run the full consultation framework
3. The AI is programmed to behave as both Mr. and Mrs. Garcia — realistic pushback included
4. Record your session audio and submit for manager review
5. Your session will be scored against the 4-category Day 3 Evaluation Checklist

15–20 MIN

MODULE 3.10

Day 3 Wrap-Up

Key Takeaways & Preview of Day 4

Day 3: The 4 Laws of Consultation Mastery

01

Control the Room or Lose the Deal

Environmental control is non-negotiable. Kitchen table, no TV, both decision-makers seated.

02

BOLT Determines Your Tone

You don't have a pitch — you have 4 pitches. One for each personality type.

03

Discovery is the Sale Before the Sale

The homeowner who builds their own case for solar will close themselves.

04

Disqualify Early to Close Late

Top closers protect their time. Saying 'not yet' is a power move, not a defeat.

Homework: Before Day 4

- Memorize the 12 Discovery Questions — be able to recite all 3 categories without notes
- Listen to 2 recorded calls: identify the BOLT type of each homeowner and note what changed your read
- Prepare your Roof Assessment Kit: phone with LIDAR access, checklist, panel photos on device
- Run one self-recorded mock discovery with a partner — submit to your manager for review

📋 TRAINER NOTE: Consistency between training days is where reps separate. Day 4 moves into The Presentation, which is entirely dependent on the quality of the discovery questions asked in Day 3.

COMING UP: DAY 4

Presentation Mastery & The Close

📊 Presentation Mastery

Building and delivering the numbers that close the deal

🧮 The Math of Solar

Utility escalation, ROI, payback period — told simply

🛡️ Handling Big Objections

Price, financing, warranties, installer trust — all covered

✍️ The Close

Asking for the signature with confidence and no pressure

Solar Accelerator · Day 3 Complete · Come back tomorrow ready to close.
